CHARLES A. BOUTELLE. FOR CONGRESSMEN:

Mr. Bass Laid Out.

As will be seen by the report is our local columns the Democrats of this city held their caucuses last evening for the election of delegates to the State and District conventions. For some time the nir has been rife with reports that the fight for Histrict delegates, to nominate a delegate to the Chicago convention, was to be "to the knife and the knife to the hilt," and that notwithstanding Mr. Bass' claim to supremacy and his acknowledged faculty in the way of "fixing thing;" he was not to have a walk-over, as he was to be confronted by that able and popular young Democrat, Charles L. Snow. The matter was somewhat complicated, however, by the fact that white Mr. Bass was working in harness with Mr. White, the candidate for delegate-at-large, Mr. White was a close friend of Mr. Snow and the personal friends of each were the friends of the other, Mr. Hill, the opposing can-following here as against Mr. White ... Our local report tells the whole story, that notwithstanding the browbeating in his own and other wards, he failed to secure a majority of the delegates from the different wards, while Mr. Snow, in cluding the delegates at large of which he was placed at the head by acclamation, secured fifteen out of the twenty-four delegates, while some say that his excess is even larger than that. At times the caucus was a perfect pandemonium and when it broke up the feeling which existed was anything but harmonious. Mr. Bass, by his peculiar tuctics, may succreed in obtaining the election as a dele- INSURANCE COMPANIES. gate to the convention, but he must meet and overcome the solid fact that his own city wants none of him.

says: Congressman Boutelle talked with Mr. Blaine for nearly an hour, to-day, and presumably about politics, although the gentleman from Bangor declined to say what was the subject under consideration. "Mr. Blaine was cheerful," he said, "and in better bealth than I have seen him for tive years, full of vigor and as alert in slep, in speech and in movement generall, as he was five years ago." "Is he going to write the letter Mar-hall

Hamsdell says he is, clearing the field for the President?" "Well," ssid Mr. Boutelle, "I should judge from what he said he is going to. give up permanship and take to saving wood. He thinks he needs more muscular strength, and can improve better by sawing wood than in handling a pen. H+ is not going to write any more letters."

American Tin Plate.

Only a little while ago-less than two years, Democratic prators were parading up and down the country telling the dear people what burdens were to be beaped upon them if the McKinley bill became a law, and how the poor laboring man would have to suffer by reason of the great additional cost of his dirner pail, "the amount of the tariff to be acded to the cost of the tin." How has the result proved? The McKinley bill became a law and such a rate of duty was placed upon tin that it enabled Americans to compete with Englishmen and to build up factories to give employment to our compeople instead of sending millions of CORPORATION BONDS! dollars to enrich foreign capitalists. Only by protection against foreign competition could these factories have been started, and how about the added cost?

The writer yesterday stepped into the store of Pritchard & Fairbanks, on Exchange street and there was shown a new line of goods which they have just received from the S. A. Wilde Manus their new style dinner pail made of American tin plate. The tin is of the most excellent quality and equal in all respects to the best Welsh. In answer to the question as to the cost it was replied that they were retailed at 50 cents each just the same as they were before the liar continues to say that the people are paying a big price for something they do not get. Is it so? The above is a complete refutation of the assertion.

In a three column "Survey of the Political Field." by Murat Halstead, in the New York Herald, the writer answers very plainly and very sensibly the question raised by some as to the propriety or impropriety of Mr. Blaine's acceptance of the nomination for President at Minneapolis. On this subject he says

Mr. Blaine will have to deckle within himself whether he can afford to take the Presidency. The fact that he voluntarily and handsomely wrote a letter some time ago declaring that he was not a candidate and his name would not an act as and handsomely wrote a letter some time ago declaring that he was not a candidate and his name would not go before the contion, and that he was undoubtedly in sarreat in saying so, stops him of course from an act that implies a self seeking candidately, and draws the line there. But if, without a word from, some one gets up in the Minneapolis convention and nominates him, and a majority of the convention are of a like mind, what is he to do about it! I took two letters and two telegrams in 1888 to prevent his nomination. Is it absolutely necessary that he should now protest to that extent? He may say to his friends, with or without giving his casons for it, that he cannot seeps then amination and will not be a candidate if he is nominated. It is, though, c carly within his discretion. I cannot see wherein it would be dishonorable or an act of had faith in the form of a self seeking candidacy to consent to the voice of the convention if he feels that he is competen: to assume the responsibilities that would follow it.

If there is a question in the Convention

assame the responsibilities that would follow it.

If there is a question in the Convention not of loyalty—for, as there is nothing royalist in the matter, but of good faith and profound consideration for the olgality, multilion and sensibility of the President—the answer on behalf of Mr. Blaine is, that through the whole per odduring which delegates to the Republican National Convention were being pelected, from the time before the first until after the last was chosen, the letter of renunciation, as it has been most fitty called, of the Mr. Blaine, was before the formery without a word or act of qualification, and she revival in the last few days of the Blaine feeling has been without his aid or configurance and its the result of a spontaneous and irresistible impalie.

It is not as well known as it should—a, or not as appreciation, you confidence as it is not as well known as it should—a, or not so that it is like the last few days of the Blaine of the last few days of the Blaine of the last few days of the Blaine and irresistible impalie.

adopted. They are practically the same as those of the N. E. I. S. A. A. for 1891. The secretary was ordered to have the constitution, by-laws and rules printed at constitution, by laws and love pines.

The treasurer was ordered to refund forfelts put up by base ball teams.

The constitution was amended so that hereafter a competitor in annual championship contest need only be a member of school from beginning of term instead of for three months.

Under the new by-laws the following are events in the annual championship games: Running 100 yards; running 220 yards; running one-quarter mile; rouning
